

I want to make my opinion known that I think your ongoing attempt to do away with caps on the number of media outlets (newspaper, radio, tv) that a single media conglomerate can own is ridiculous and clearly against the anti-trust laws established in our quickly diminishing country. This will only lead to the same gobbling up of local stations by media giants like Clear Channel and its subsidiaries. It's no secret that Clear Channel has lined the current administration's pockets with campaign donations and that the media giant has been staging pro-war rallies to rub noses with the administration for favors, such as FCC Director Micheal Powell's stance that such restrictions on monopolization of local media markets should "disappear". You are spoon feeding the American public into a stupifying haze of idiocy and pre-formed opinions. If you allow these media caps to "disappear" it will only be one more step towards enveloping the U.S. in the smoke screen of repression that we are supposedly fighting in the current war on Iraq. I am sick of our government "of the people, for the people, and by the people" drifting more and more toward "of the few, for the few, and by the few" with this all-in-the family approach to power distribution encouraged by the right-wing and allowed by the general complacency (or stupidity) of the American public.
